

WENZAO

Wenzao's pride: Third-year English Major Student won International Marketing Competition.

Chiazky with other competitors representing Singapore

UE3A's student sky-rocketed Wenzao's English Department reputation after being part of "Exco-Taiwan" competition winning team.

Chiazky Huang, a student from the class UE3A and his 4 other team members, took the grand prize in the marketing competition held as a part of Taiwan Exhibition and Convention Industry Show, competing with students from all around the globe such as Korea, Singapore and China.

The Wenzao team won the prize by designing a marketing plan Kaohsiung as a potential city for MICE Industry development. Other than presented to the tournament judges, the project plan was also presented by real potential companies that might be interested to invest in it.

Chiazky and his team went through painstaking and time-consuming preparation period, including spending countless nights staying up late to gather materials and designing their presentation. In total, it took around 2 months in to prepare for the competition.

--by Wilson Huang

Expensive Solar Bus Stops deemed as "a failure"

Two solar bus stops in front of Wenzao's main gate, each cost a humongous amount of 160,000 NT$, were criticized by some passengers, mainly Wenzao students, as "a failure",

The purpose of the solar bus stop is to give more lighting for passengers waiting for bus at night and especially prevent criminal action which could potentially arise. However, passengers are complaining about how the hi-tech traffic tool doesn't provide one of the simplest functions needed as a normal bus stop: as a shelter from sunshine and rain.

Kaohsiung's local government, been criticized for inefficient and ridiculous tax spending, is expected to deal with the complaints soon.--by Max Chen

Wenzao E-Car to hit the road soon

Wenzao Language Diagnostic and Consultation Center (LDCC) is going to start their "E-Car" program, a car specially modified for foreign language learning.--by Jovian Gautama

Where Are You Christmas? : No Christmas Holiday for Wenzaorians

Wenzao's decision for not giving a day off on Christmas Day, despite being a Catholic college, was questioned by students.--by Jovian Gautama

International guest lecturers arrived at Wenzao for Sister School Week

Wenzao promotes Taiwanese culture and hospitality by inviting guest lecturers from sister schools around the globe for Sister School Week.--by Jovian Gautama